

The Trial of Guiteau.

On the tenth day Judge Cox, at the opening of the proceedings, called the attention of the jury to the fact that the defendant, Charles J. Guiteau, was charged with the murder of President Garfield, and that there must be no manifestation of feeling. The judge also told the jury that the defendant was charged with the murder of President Garfield, and that there must be no manifestation of feeling. The judge also told the jury that the defendant was charged with the murder of President Garfield, and that there must be no manifestation of feeling.

On the eleventh day of the trial Guiteau improved the opportunity of a lull in the opening proceedings by attacking Henry Ward Beecher, saying: "I don't know my friend Henry Ward Beecher, I don't know my friend Henry Ward Beecher, I don't know my friend Henry Ward Beecher." The judge then called the attention of the jury to the fact that the defendant was charged with the murder of President Garfield, and that there must be no manifestation of feeling.

One Meal a Day.

Dr. C. E. Page sends to the Journal of Chemistry an account of experiments made to show that one meal a day is enough for a man:

"S. N. S., twenty-eight years old, resolved to adopt the one-meal system, and did so, leaving off meat and all condiments, as salt and pepper, and eating chiefly wheat-meal bread and fruit, the bread made from unsifted meal and mixed with water only, no salt or bread-raising devices—unleavened bread. Within seven months his weight increased from one hundred and forty-five pounds to one hundred and seventy pounds, and his strength of both body and mind had increased in proportion. His labor had been severe; he is a machinist and an inventor, working ten hours every day, and doing a good deal of practical and profitable thinking at the same time. It is now a full year since he came to one meal, and the weight gained has been maintained, and his health is perfect. During the last winter, for the purpose of testing the sufficiency of one meal of pure food in the most trying labor, he worked in an iron foundry for three months, and notwithstanding the extreme and frequent changes of temperature incident to the work, on cold mornings, with the mercury below zero, and in the afternoon at 120 degrees above, and all hands sweating like rain, he had not a 'cold' for the winter, and was the only employe thus exempt. He had formerly been subject to frequent attacks of the above disease. His daily ration consists of six ounces to nine ounces (according to labor)—in Graham flour, beside fruit sufficient to supply all the liquids necessary half a dozen apples or their equivalent to other fruit. He is rarely thirsty, but sometimes, if too little fruit is taken at meal time, he takes a small draft of water in the course of the day. This meal is taken at night, after entire recovery from fatigue, usually at about seven o'clock. During the month of May, 1881, just passed, he gained sixty hours, or six full days, working extra at his bench, sometimes working right through to midnight, and taking his 'breakfast' after a short rest, before retiring. No man in his employ has gained so much time. He has occasionally made a trial of bolted-flour bread, but has invariably experienced a loss of weight and strength."

"My own experience goes far to prove the efficiency of the above regimen for either the brain or muscle worker. I am now taking but one meal a day, and find myself perfectly nourished, weight and strength maintained, on about fourteen ounces of unleavened wheat-meal bread, to the mastication of which I devote an hour or more. I find that six cold gems, weighing about fourteen ounces, without either butter or milk, chewed deliberately and thoroughly dissolved by the juices of the month, will sustain me much better than when eaten warm with butter or milk, or both together added, and eaten as fast as one naturally eats hot rolls or butter or bread or milk. Considering the manner in which people in general both their food, it is not strange that a large proportion of it fails of digestion. Starchy food cannot be transformed into pure blood entire, except as far as the change is begun in the mouth."

"Until a few months ago I took my food in the morning, but I find the evenings better time. During the day the brain and muscles can have everything their own way, without interfering or hindering digestion, and at even-er, after sufficient rest, there is perfect tranquility of body and mind and leisure to digest." I had never been a 'good sleeper' until I adopted this system of diet. People who eat several meals a day do well to take the least on early, and the lighter they make it the better, but dyspepsia may rest assured that, of itself considered, the evening meal is not the cause of their wakefulness or troubled dreams. When I ate three meals of a mixed diet, I could not make the last one simple enough to give me complete rest at night, but now, when rested from my day's labor, I can eat my full vegetarian meal and sleep like a well-fed babe. I could give you a number of examples like the foregoing, of the success of this space permit me to tend to prove the superiority of vegetable over animal diet, and of the entire want over the most scientifically impoverished article."

Mason & Hamlin Organ Company. At the great Italian Industrial Exhibition just closing in Milan, Italy, the highest awards for musical instruments, a silver medal and diploma, were taken by an American manufacturer, the Mason & Hamlin Organ Company, whose cabinet organs were judged to be superior that they were the only record organs of any manufacturer, European or American, which were awarded a medal. It is a great honor to these makers that in Italy itself, the very home of music, their organs should receive such distinction. They excelled much interest among musicians, and were by special order repeatedly exhibited to the royal court by Carlo Dued, the distinguished artist of Rome.

RESCUED FROM DEATH. William J. Conklin, of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1870 I was afflicted with a severe cold, followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and sleep, and my health rapidly declined. I was finally admitted to the hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half-dollar. At one time a friend told me that I was dead, and I gave up hope. A friend told me of Dr. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when, to my surprise, I commenced to cough, and my health began to improve. I was discharged from the hospital, and I have been well ever since. I write this hoping every one afflicted with diseased lungs will take Dr. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. It is a great remedy, and I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness.

The Effects of Climate.

A climate not necessarily unhealthy often proves so to those unaccustomed to its peculiarities. There is, however, a medicinal means of acclimating itself of which residents and sojourners in unaccustomed or malarious climates have not been slow to avail themselves. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicinal safeguard and acclimating tonic of standard reputation, which travelers, emigrants, tourists, mariners, and all who have tastes and pursuits entail exposure, subjection to changes of temperature, unusual or unwholesome diet and water, and the fatigue attendant upon long journeys by land or sea, concur in pronouncing it reliable, agreeable and salutary. It is a remedy for disorders of the liver, stomach and bowels, very prevalent in malarious regions and the tropics, as a preventive of fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble, and as a restorative of vigor, it is also held in the highest estimation.

FEAR of punishment and hope of reward move cowards and scoundrels. Virtue is independent of either.

What Physicians Say. SAN LEBLANC, Cal., January 6, 1877. Dr. W. P. Pierce, Haverhill, Mass., says: "I have employed your 'Pleasant Purgative Pills' in my practice for the last four years. I now use no other alternative cathartic medicine in all chronic derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels. I know of nothing that equals them."

Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has become so thoroughly established in public favor that it is not for the thoughtfulness of people it would not be necessary to call attention to its power to cure consumption, which is scrofula of the lungs, and other blood diseases, eruptions, blotches, pimples, ulcers and "liver complaint."

How Women Would Vote. Were we to have a vote, every one in the land who has used Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," would vote it to be an unfailing remedy for the diseases peculiar to her sex.

Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy. Self-command is the main elegance.
